Mal de Meleda (MdM) is a rare type of palmoplantar keratoderma with autosomal recessive transmission. It is characterized by clinically symmetrical palmoplantar keratoderma and hyperkeratosis that surrounds the backs of the hands and feet in the style of gloves and socks.