The main goal of the study is to present the findings of a field research related to the impact of environmental education on the awareness and knowledge of Turkish elementary school students about nature, environmental issues and human-environment interactions. Pre-surveys and post-surveys were used to gather data. The overall results indicate that environmental education does have an impact on the knowledge and awareness of the elementary students about environment, and this impact is higher on female students than male students.