In this project, the design and production of a carbon fiber composite based lightweight multifunctional/high-ballistic armor device with electromagnetic shielding property was aimed. Multilayer woven fabric having properties such as high strength, high modulus, low elasticity will be used as reinforcement and multi-walled carbon nanotube modified resin will be used as matrix. High amount of carbon based materials will enhance the magnetic shielding efficiency of composite armor.