Abstract

United States Relations with the Ottoman Empire in 1830 as the official "Treaty of commerce and navigation" based on American missionaries to come to the Ottoman Empire, has been important in terms of social relations. Monroe Doctrine in the 19th century within the context of the relationship in a manner that can be considered a good while; especially 19yy breaks, and at the beginning of the 20th Century Armenian events during the First World War, Woodrow Wilson’s Muslim and anti-Turkish policies is corrupted. During the war years; There are different fronts with the Ottoman Empire, the Ottoman capitulations unilaterally removing other important factors in the deterioration of the relationship has been. The distance between countries a very high level of problems in this relationship for climbing Temporarily provide relief in. However, after World War I peace conference in Paris followed the policies of the product showed that the pre-war period.

Keywords: Great War (First World War), Ottoman US Relations, Woodrow Wilson, American missionaries, Armenians.