With the effect of EU membership process and the acceleration of globalization and the democratization movements following the Cold War, political balance has changed. Because of the security perception that has changed in last decades, external factors such as end of the Cold War, European Union (EU) process and globalization and internal factors, in Turkey, the relationship between military and government has dramatically undergone a change. The aim of this study is to analyse that the changes and transformations of the relationship between elected ones (politicians) and assigned ones (soldiers) during last years So in 2002 the ruling the JDP in Turkey.