Obturator hernia is a rare hernia which causes of small bowel obstruction and usually needs early surgical intervention. Its diagnosis is difficult cause of nonspecific symptoms and findings. In the past, obturator hernia was diagnosed during the operation but now we can determine it by computed tomography before the operation. We presented a rare case of obturator hernia cause of high mortality and morbidity if its diagnosis delays.