Tourism sector is a sector that is intensively shown interest by both developed and underdeveloped countries from past to present day. Probably the most important feature of tourism sector for a developing country as Turkey is the power of creating employment. It is known that women started involving in business life after the industrial revolution. Recent studies show that women take part in business life with an increasing rate, however this involvement is in low levels and not sufficiently in “top level” management staff. Revealing the insufficiency of the number of the women in management level of the hotel businesses with a literature survey is the main purpose of the study. In the conclusion of the study, it has been made firm that women working in the hotel businesses in Turkey cannot take positions in the top management level because of facing problems like sexual apartheid, glass ceiling, queen bee syndrome, wage inequality, mobbing, sexual harassment, lack of confidence.
