Upon the proclamation of republic in 1923, the new Turkish state went into effort of establishing a national and modern system in every field. It is aimed "to ensure the development of the nation according to the modern needs of a nation" by abolishing the institutions that made the Turkish society outdated.