Pedophilia is a disease that usually occurs in adult men who has sexual desire or arousal against children who has not gone into adolescence or 13 years of age or less. The importance of the study: It is the determination of the knowledge level of the society about this disease which is frequently called in recent years. The aim of this study is to determine the level of knowledge about pedophilia and to increase the knowledge and awareness of people about this issue. In this context, the questionnaire developed by the researcher reached 100 people and the information about pedophilia was measured. The universe of the study is consisted of Isparta city center and the sample consisted of one hundred people over the age of eighteen selected randomly. As a result of the study, it was understood that the individuals with higher education level had higher awareness about pedophilia.