

Susuz Caravanserai as an example of a caravanserai in Turkish archeological research in Middle Age

Susuz Caravanserai at Bucak district within Burdur county is one of the architectural patterns that has reached up to present day as a proof of economic liveliness and social prosperity.

If one look at it from architectural or decoration point of view, Susuz Caravanserai is one of the important buildings belonged to the Anatolian Seljuk times. Taking plan and decoration into consideration, it needs to be handled from Turkish Archeological research of Middle Age point of view.

An excavation work need to be carried on in order to reveal the existence of building types which is thought to be in the open section and its environ of the caravanserai which consists of two parts as a plan in particular. Some serious mistakes made by researchers who have been searching on a building in the plan scale have been observed.

So taking this and similar justifications into consideration the necessity of a works need to be done in order to expose immediately the original position present form of the building became obvious. The project of the restoration of the building should be immediately done. Basic condition of revitalizing the building is to functionalize.
