Tahsin Yücel's novel Gökdelen (Skyscraper) published in 2006, narrates the life that will eventuate in 2073 in Istanbul. The novel is an anti-utopia. Istanbul of 2073 is a city that is composed of skyscrapers like New York. In this city with eight millions habitants, people prefers to fly in the sky than walking along the coast. The balance of the nature is destroyed; the nature life is almost passed away. Through Judgement is going private, people are getting slaves of their permissive decisions. Everybody, except the riches gets poorly off and draws away to the mountains.
